A court appearance lasted just minutes yesterday for the man accused in HRM's first alleged murder of the year.

Steven Maurice Colley, 49, was charged with first-degree murder, attempted murder, and four weapons-related charges. The four weapons-related charges are based on a shotgun Colley allegedly had.

Andre Jonathan Edward Slawter, 20, was found shot dead in a car parked near his home on Brian Street in East Preston at around 3:30 p.m. on Wednesday. Tywan Kimo Slawter, 35, was also in the vehicle but received minor injuries.

Hiding his face from cameras, Colley was brought into Dartmouth court Thursday afternoon. He sat silently as the charges were listed and a court date of Feb. 17 was set.

Crown attorney Arthur Theuerkauf said the prosecution will have to wait until it has the full police report before deciding if the first-degree murder charge will be downgraded.

And there's no word on bail yet.

"Any person charged with murder must apply for bail to the Supreme Court," said Theuerkauf. "I suspect once they have disclosure, they will decide whether or not they'll make that application."

If the case goes to trial, it could take about a year to get a court date, Theuerkauf added.

According to court documents, Colley lives on Caledonia Road, where police followed a suspect vehicle after Wednesday's alleged shooting on Brian Street.

He's also facing charges of assault on a different matter and was scheduled to appear in court on Feb. 12.

Those charges related to an incident on Sept. 20 when two men and a woman were allegedly assaulted.

According to court documents, Andre Slawter was due to appear in court on Feb. 23 and June 17 for charges of assault, threats and court order breaches.

Hormone therapy safe: Expert panel

TREATMENT Hormone therapy is a safe and viable option for some Canadian women who want relief from hot flashes, night sweats and other severe symptoms of menopause, a panel of experts said yesterday.

The Society of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists of Canada, which released the updated medical advice, said women and doctors have been needlessly frightened away from hormone therapy after rafts of troubling reports linked it with an increased risk for breast cancer, heart attacks and strokes.

But new research — and re-analysis of old evidence — has found short-term use of hormone therapy by women early in menopause is the most effective way to alleviate symptoms of menopause and has "little appreciable effect on risk," said Dr. Robert Reid, a co-author of the guidelines and chair of the division of reproductive endocrinology and infertility at Queen's University in Ontario.

Hormone therapy has been embroiled in controversy since the U.S. National Institutes of Health suddenly stopped the Women's Health Initiative trial in July 2002 after investigators linked the drugs with higher rates of breast cancer, heart attacks and stroke.

Not guilty verdict in condom case

Putting holes in condom not assault: Judge

rachel.boomer@metronews.ca

A Dartmouth man who put holes in his girlfriend's condoms in an attempt to get her pregnant didn't sexually assault her, a Nova Scotia Supreme Court judge ruled yesterday.

Craig Jaret Hutchinson, 38, had been charged with aggravated sexual assault in the case. Justice Gerald Moir acquitted him yesterday, ruling Hutchinson, who sabotaged the condoms after his girlfriend began suggesting she wanted to break up, didn't expose her to a "significant risk" of physical harm.

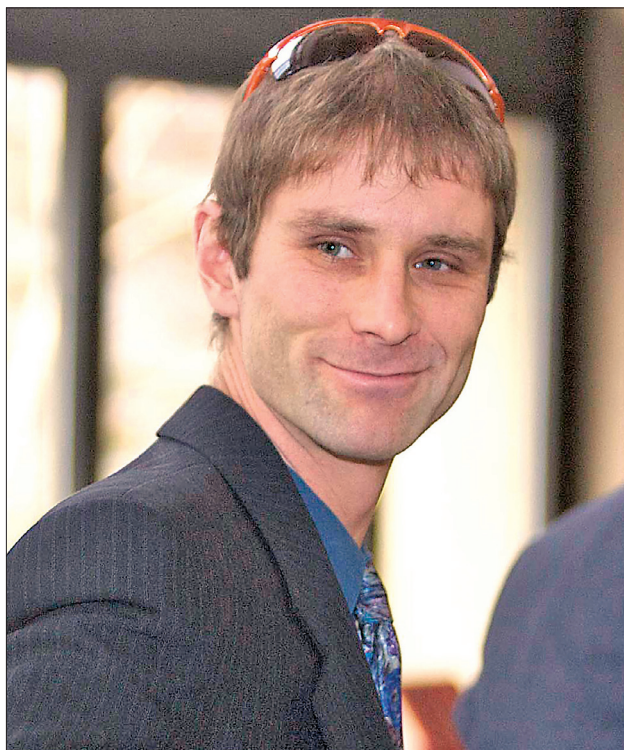

"The evidence suggests Mr. Hutchinson did something that was not only fraudulent, it was dastardly — but it does not prove sexual assault," Moir said.

"Whether it proves some other crime, I don't know."

Hutchinson smiled, but didn't comment to reporters. His ex-girlfriend wasn't in court when the verdict was read.

The couple dated for nine months in 2006, and broke up in November. Hutchinson's girlfriend testified she began discussing a breakup the summer of 2006, but Hutchinson wanted to save the relationship.

The couple continued to use condoms, as they had throughout their relationship, but Hutchinson started to insist his girlfriend take pregnancy tests. In early September, she found out she was pregnant.

Craig Jaret Hutchinson, 38, smiles after his acquittal yesterday in Nova Scotia Supreme Court. Hutchinson was charged with aggravated sexual assault for poking holes in his girlfriend's condoms.

After the two broke up, Hutchinson sent a series of text messages to his ex, telling her to throw out the condoms she kept in her bedside table.

"I poked holes in all of them. I wanted a baby with you so bad, I sabotaged them," read one of the messages.

She had an abortion at the nine-week mark, and got a three-week infection afterward.

Defence lawyer Patrick

MacEwan didn't dispute the text messages in court. He successfully argued that the sabotage wasn't a sexual assault and that it couldn't be proved the couple used any of the sabotaged condoms.

The woman agreed to sleep with Hutchinson, and could have gotten pregnant during one of the times they didn't use a condom, he said.

Crown attorney Jennifer MacLellan had argued piercing the condoms negated the woman's consent.

Crown considering appeal

Crown attorney Jennifer MacLellan said yesterday she's considering an appeal, and believes the case could end up at the Supreme Court of Canada.

"It is so unique. I haven't been able to find a lot of case law. Given that it involves such a serious women's issue, I think a higher court might take an interest," MacLellan said.

She said provincial court Judge Anne Derrick, when she sent the case to trial, made a ruling that was exactly the opposite of Moir's decision yesterday.

Derrick, a lower-court judge, had ruled that a jury might be able to conclude the sabotage meant the sex wasn't consensual, and that it did expose her to physical risks associated with pregnancy.

Greene's comparison of NDP to communists upsets opposition

paul.mcleod@metronews.ca

CONTROVERSY Could Darrell Jong-Il be the next premier of Nova Scotia? Or perhaps Fidel Dexter?

Opposition parties were shaking their heads yesterday after one of Nova Scotia's new Tory senators compared the "socialism" of NDP Leader Darrell Dexter and his party to North Korea and Cuba.

Stephen Greene, former deputy chief of staff to Premier Rodney MacDonald who was recently named to the Senate, made the remarks Jan. 17 at a nomination meeting in Aylesford. They were reported by the Kings County Register.

Yesterday Dexter dismissed the jab as "rhetorical nonsense."

"When they have to resort to rhetoric of this nature, it poses the question of how seriously can you actually take them?" he said.

But Liberal Leader Stephen McNeil did think Greene should apologize. And he called on Premier Rodney MacDonald to denounce the insults.

"Many Nova Scotians are fed up with politicians. They're tired of this kind of behaviour and when one of us does it, it tarnishes us all," said McNeil.

Greene made the comments as part of his speech about the "outstanding leadership" of Rodney MacDonald and how he should be elected over the NDP.

He argued against the perception that an NDP government is inevitable.

"Are we going to ignore the lessons of the 21st century? No, and we have to prove it in the next election," the Register quoted him as saying.

MacDonald refused to comment on Greene's statements, saying he didn't know anything about them.

"I'm not even going to get into nonsense comments," said MacDonald.

Hydro project headed for Parrsboro

PAUL MCLEOD
paul.mcleod@metronews.ca

After a year of scouring the Bay of Fundy and more than $1 million, scientists have found the perfect site for Nova Scotia's tidal energy project.

Three test turbines will be placed near Black Rock, about three kilometres west of Parrsboro. The test project is due to start in 2010 and will generate enough power for 3,000 homes.

"The amount of water that moves into the Bay of Fundy in one direction exceeds all the flow of water of all the streams and rivers in the world," said Scott Travers, president of Minas Basin Pulp and Power.

"This is our chance to prove we can harness this energy in what is considered to be the most prized tidal resource in the world."

Black Rock was picked because it's deep, sediment-free and free of turbulence.

Travers' company is working with U.K.-based Marine Current Turbines on one of the three turbines. Marine Current recently installed the world's most powerful in-stream tidal turbine in Northern Ireland.

Tidal power is currently much more expensive than wind, another source of green energy. But one major advantage of tidal is that the steady tides offer a much more dependable energy source.

The turbines are set to be up and running by 2010, but they are only a test project set to last about two years. Their five-megawatt output makes up less than two per cent of Nova Scotia's electricity needs.

But Travers said if the tests go well, permanent turbines will be put in place that will last between 50 and 100 years.

"We're pioneers here. We're going to learn an awful lot about what kind of problems we encounter. It'll help us from there in a controlled, methodical way, working with the province, with what other areas in the Bay of Fundy we can go to," said Travers.

Atlantic Canada economy bearing up, says brewer

rachel.boomer@metronews.ca

The recession that started outside Atlantic Canada's borders is hurting us, but not as badly as you might think, says New Brunswick beer magnate Andrew Oland.

Oland, president of Moosehead Breweries, was in town this week to speak at the Halifax Grammar School's 50th anniversary. He told Metro on Thursday that compared to the previous 1990s recession, unemployment numbers — particularly in the cities — have stayed relatively low.

"It's still pretty close to traditional levels. If we're through the worst of (the recession), then the region will be OK."

In December 2008, Halifax boasted a 5.8 per cent unemployment rate — lower than the national rate of 6.6 per cent. Nova Scotia had 8.2 per cent unemployment.

Moosehead keeps a close eye on this, of course, because if you don't have a job, you're probably not buying much beer.

"People need money in their pockets. It's an affordable luxury; if someone's looking to splurge on themselves, they can buy a case of beer to share," Oland said.

But he expects local projects will continue to keep the economy going in this region. New Brunswick has the refurbishment of the Point Lepreau nuclear plant, along with a new LNG terminal and a proposed new refinery.

"I notice a fair amount of economic growth in Halifax. Whenever I'm in Halifax, I'm amazed. It just seems like any piece of land around the harbour you can put a house on, people are trying to do that."

Talks aim to avert school bus strike

Hopes hang on weekend meeting to stave off Tuesday picket

jennifer.taplin@metronews.ca

Last-ditch efforts to stop a school bus driver strike will be taking place this weekend.

Drivers were fired up on Wednesday night as they staged an information picket in front of the Halifax Regional School Board office in Dartmouth.

"It's to let the school board know we are serious and that we will be going on strike as of Tuesday morning unless our employer comes back to the table with a fair offer," said bus driver Pat Briggs.

She's driven a special needs bus for 29 years and she makes $12.49 an hour for five hours a day.

"I made more than that in 2001 and I had a pension at that time. Now I don't have a pension," Briggs said.

The 300 drivers, monitors and mechanics are "ready to go" on strike, she said. They will be in a strike position as of 12:01 a.m. on Tuesday.

Truro businessman Dick Cotterill is a former U.S. marine who deserted to Nova Scotia during the Vietnam War. He believes today's American war deserters should be welcome in Canada.

Vietnam war deserter says Canada should welcome soldiers fleeing Iraq duty

MILITARY Instead of deporting American military deserters, Canada should be welcoming them as potential immigrants, says a former U.S. marine who ended up in Nova Scotia during the Vietnam war.

"I have a lot of respect for the military," said Bible Hill resident Dick Cotterill, who made his way to Canada in 1972 after "skipping out" on his marine squadron stationed in Hawaii.

But he said five U.S. deserters currently facing deportation by the end of the month should be allowed to stay because they refused to fight an "illegal and immoral" war.

Making the decision to leave your home and family behind, go into hiding and escape to another country, he said, comes only after someone can no longer support the war effort on ethical grounds.

"Some people say that these people weren't drafted, they volunteered. Well, I wasn't drafted. I volunteered and a lot of these people, the same thing that happened to me is happening to them."

Cotterill joined the Marines in 1969. In his day, the enemy was communism, and Cotterill believed fighting was patriotic.

Three years into his service, his views changed.

"As I met the men and women who were coming home from Vietnam ... it became a moral decision for me," he said. "I didn't want to participate in that war."

He tried to get status as a conscientious objector. When that failed, he hopped a plane for home and deserted the military.

Cotterill became acquainted with some anti-war protesters at Cornell University and from there, found his way to Nova Scotia.

He's now a dual citizen, with a family, and is co-owner of a successful business.

HEALTH The province is cutting the co-payment for seniors' pharmacare. Starting April 1, those older than 65 will pay 30 per cent of the cost of their prescriptions. Currently, the copayment is 33 per cent.

The maximum annual copayment will stay at $382, so once a senior has paid that amount, the province will pick up the rest of the tab. There are about 99,000 people in the provincial seniors pharmacare program, which costs $193 million to operate. The government picks up 75 per cent of the cost; seniors pick up the other 25 per cent.

Tories plan to go $64B in red

Canada will post $64 billion in deficits over the next two fiscal years to stimulate a flagging economy, but it will return to surplus in five years, a senior government official said Thursday.

The deficits will mark an end to 12 straight years of surpluses for Canada, which had been the only member of the Group of Seven leading industrialized nations still in the black.

The aide said Ottawa would run a deficit of $30 billion in the following fiscal year, starting April 1, 2010, and deficits would keep getting smaller thereafter. Most of the stimulus spending would be short-term so as to prevent a per-

One surplus left

• The official said government revenues — including corporate and personal taxes — have been declining with the economic slowdown but, as far as he knew, the budget for the current fiscal year would remain in surplus.

manent deficit from emerging, he said.

The aide was briefing reporters ahead of the minority Conservative government's budget, which it will deliver Tuesday.

In the campaign ahead of the Oct. 14 election, Harper had said a deficit could be avoided, but as the global economy worsened he agreed at a summit in Washington the next month to join in concerted international stimulus efforts.

The figure of $34 billion represents roughly two per cent of the value of the Canadian economy.

Some economists have recently projected that, even without stimulus efforts, the country would run a deficit of between $10 billion and $15 billion. The aide said most of the expected deficit resulted from the stimulus package.

Canadians must make tough choices: Layton

ECONOMY With the country facing the worst recession in 70 years, Canadians have tough choices to make — including, for some, taking pay cuts so others can continue to work, NDP Leader Jack Layton says.

"It's that courage of the Canadian people which makes our country strong. Let's match that quiet courage with smart investments for the future. Investments that build on our productivity, not squander our prosperity," Layton said in a speech delivered to the Toronto Board of Trade.

It's that kind of courage workers will need "to take a pay cut so your friends at the plant can keep their job," Layton said.

Obama focuses on U.S. image

U.S. President Barack Obama yesterday ordered the closing of Guantanamo prison and named foreign policy troubleshooters for the Middle East and Iran as he moves to repair America's tarnished image.

Obama set a one-year deadline for shutting Guantanamo and barred harsh treatment of terrorism suspects held there.

The prison in Cuba — where prisoners have been detained for years without charge, some subjected to what human rights groups say amounted to torture — had damaged America's moral standing.

Obama waded further into his foreign policy plans by paying a visit to the State Department to welcome Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, who was confirmed by the U.S. Senate Wednesday.

His foreign policy goals include pursuing broader engagement overseas than the Bush administration, which was criticized for go-it-alone "cowboy diplomacy," and refocusing the fight against terrorism away from the Iraq war.

Thursday, Obama named George Mitchell, a former senator, as an envoy who will try to jump-start Arab-for the Middle East and North Africa.

Kaag said children, who form the majority of the 1.5 million Palestinians in the Gaza Strip, bore the brunt of the onslaught by Israeli troops. More than 400 children were among the 1,314 Palestinians killed and more than 1,800 children were injured, many suffering amputations or burns, Kaag said.

U.S. House panel approves $304B stimulus

FUNDING A House panel yesterday approved a $304-billion US package of business and individual tax breaks and aid to the unemployed that is to be part of the huge $825-billion economic stimulus sought by U.S. President Barack Obama.

The tax writing House Ways and Means Committee approved the package, which provides $275 billion in tax breaks, on a largely party-line vote.

The package includes a temporary refundable tax credit for workers, up to $500 per individual and $1,000 per couple. It also includes tax incentives for renewable energy and allows builders and other companies to write off current losses against five previous tax years. Currently businesses can write off losses against two previous years.

The bill also provides money to help the unemployed keep health insurance coverage.

The package will be combined with other elements of the proposed stimulus, which the House is expected to vote on next week.

Ringling the cellphone alarm

Marketplace

Wendy Mesley

It's the dream toy of today's kids. Something they can use to play games. Text best friends. Download the latest Jonas Brothers ring-tone. And call mom. That's right, kids today want cellphones. A survey we did of 1,000 Canadian tweens shows that almost half of them already have a cellphone.

Parents like the idea, too. Companies are keen to market cellphones as a security tool, a way to stay on top of children's whereabouts.

Today's kids are set to become the longest-term users of cellphones, starting at younger ages than ever before. Great for the phone business, but some scientists are ringing a cautionary alarm bell.

I've been following the debate about cellphone safety for 15 years. During that time, there have been two huge studies that were supposed to get to the bottom of the question, "Can cellphone radiation cause brain cancer?" The first study was inconclusive, and largely funded by the companies that make phones. I've reported on the fact that most of the research money was spent on public relations, not science, allowing companies to stand behind a wall of inconclusive studies showing phones are safe.

But now, there are cracks in that wall. Results from a second big study are trickling out, and some data suggests there is an increased risk of brain tumours. Some scientists say that this is cause for concern. Others say the data is flawed.

This isn't fringe science. The new data comes from a World Health Organization study. It's the first of its kind to take a look at what happens when people use cellphones over a long period. The final report was due three years ago, but it still hasn't been released because the scientists involved are deeply divided. And of course the repercussions are huge.

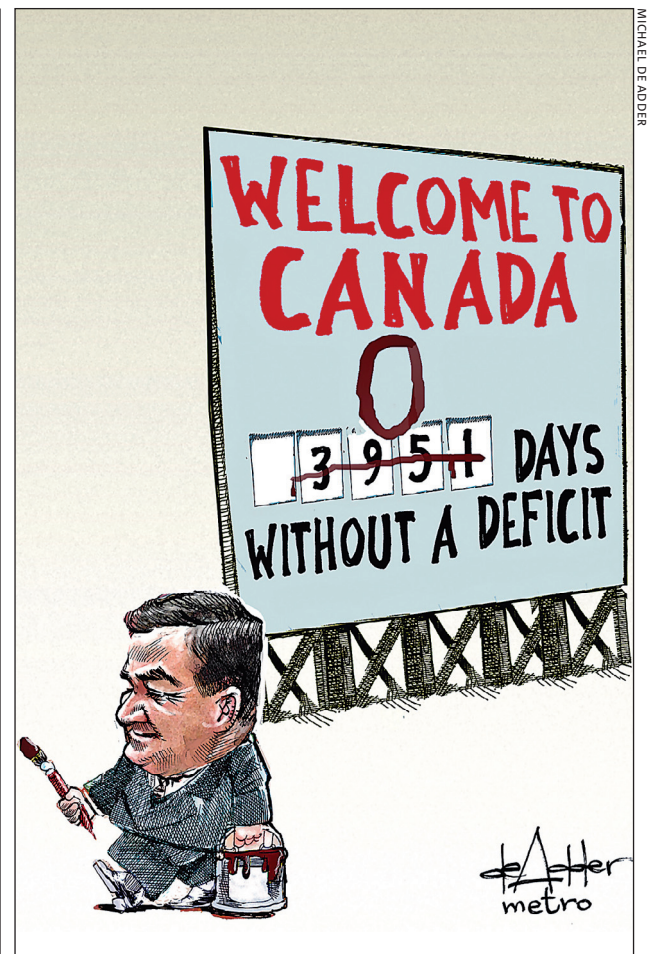

And that's why there is concern about kids. They are a growing cellphone market, and possibly more vulnerable to cellphone radiation. This year, a Swedish scientist released preliminary data that shows kids who start using phones in their teens have a five times higher risk of developing brain cancer.

In the last two years, warnings about kids using cellphones have been issued in Germany, the U.K., France, Belgium, Israel, Russia, India and Finland. But in Canada? Even though this new evidence is out, Health Canada still says: "There is currently no convincing evidence of serious health effects."

So, until the answer is clear, what should parents do? Cellphones are a useful tool, but kids could limit their use. Make shorter calls. And remember that phones do emit radiation, so try to hold it a few centimetres from your head. Until we know more, a little bit of caution can't hurt anyone.

Halifax Regional Municipality, it's time to make a name change

UrbanCompass

Paul McLeod

If you've ever travelled, been asked where you're from, and answered "I'm from Halifax," then you are a liar.

Like Santa Claus and Stephen Harper's soul, "Halifax" does not exist. Instead we live in the 12-syllabled linguistic atrocity known as Halifax Regional Municipality.

The moniker was initially an "interim" name made up by a bureaucrat during amalgamation in the 1990s. Council was supposed to pick a permanent name later.

Now, if you were born with an unfortunate name like Ronald G. Fugglepants, you'd probably change it. Yet HRM never got around to doing that. The problem is councilors are notoriously territorial and couldn't agree.

We couldn't go with something simple like Halifax because some people in Dartmouth, Sackville, Bedford, etc. got all up in arms.

"I don't live in Halifax! I live in Dartmouth!" Coun. Gloria McCluskey belted out at one council meeting.

Yeah, except Dartmouth is part of a larger thing and that needs a name, too. Every other large city has this issue, but they don't go around calling themselves Toronto Metropolitan Conglomerate, or London Interurban Megalopolis.

Calling it Halifax won't make Dartmouth, Sackville, et al. disappear.

And Halifax is such a great name. Its soft consonants roll off the tongue up until the jazzy twist ending of an x. Nice. On the other hand, Halifax Regional Municipality sounds like the verbal equivalent of flushing a cat down a toilet.

To be fair, switching over has its downsides. The name change is estimated to cost a million dollars. That seems expensive, but think of it this way — the price would be spread out over several years, and the longer we hold off, the pricier it will get.

So if we want to stick with this name forever then fine, let's all bask in our bureaucratic gibberish homeland. But if we want our city to some day have a respectable name, we should get on it sooner rather than later.

Paul McLeod is a staff reporter at Metro Halifax. He is currently in rehab for being a political junkie. It's going badly.

In brief

RETAIL Canadian retail sales dropped by 2.4 per cent in November from October, the steepest decline in nearly 11 years, and analysts said they expected worse to come as the recession starts to bite harder.

JOBS Microsoft Corp. stunned Wall Street with disappointing results that included plans to slash up to 5,000 jobs and a warning that revenue will almost certainly drop over the next two quarters. REUTERS

Swift recovery seen

The Canadian economy will contract by an exceptionally sharp 4.8 per cent in the first quarter of this year and continue to shrink through mid-year, but the recovery will be swifter than in the past two recessions, the Bank of Canada said Thursday.

Signalling the economy is now in the most dramatic part of the downturn,

Not as bad

- The Bank of Canada's projections of three quarters of recession this time contrasts with six quarters in 1981-82 and four quarters of contraction in the early 1990s.

the central bank said gross domestic product likely shrank by 2.3 per cent in the fourth quarter of last year and would decline by one per cent in the second quarter of this year before returning to growth.

It said the growing output gap would not be eliminated until mid-2011, but this would be about a year or more faster than in the past, partly because inflation expectations are better anchored. REUTERS

Analysts warn of drop in travel

VACATIONS Cracks are beginning to form in the packaged holiday industry.

Flight Centre spokesperson Allison Wallace said this month will be a litmus test when it comes to gauging the outlook for 2009.

"January is traditionally our busiest month for inquiries and bookings and we're up on last year," she said.

Analysts, however, say it's a matter of time before Canadians put the brakes on unnecessary travel.

The threat of slumping demand comes at a bad time for tour operators, which have collectively increased seats in the North American market by more than 15 per cent this winter.

MATTHEW WUEST

Cam Russell has "the hammer" now, and it's up to him — and only him — how he wants to use it.

Russell, who last week added general manager to his title as head coach of the Halifax Mooseheads, has preached for more than two years his desire to ice a hard-working, blue-collar team that the Metro Centre crowd will appreciate.

While those traits escaped his teams in his first two seasons behind the bench, he hopes that changes for good now that he's taken over the GM duties from Marcel Pate-naude.

"I'd like to think that if players know there's one guy that has the hammer,

"They've got to perform," Mooseheads GM/coach Cam Russell said of his players. "If they don't, there will be consequences."

they've got to perform," Russell said. "If they don't, there will be consequences. It makes it easier when there's one guy applying those consequences."

The Mooseheads, who host the Quebec Remparts Friday at 7 p.m. and visit the Cape Breton Screaming Eagles on Sunday at 4 p.m., are a hard-working team Russell has been proud of this season, despite a woeful 13-29-2-2 record.

But Russell is under pressure to deliver results for owner Bobby Smith, who fired Patenaude in part because the Herd did not win more games in the first half of the season. Smith puts an emphasis on results, even in rebuilding years.

While some would argue that is a conflict of interest that leads a coach to play older players over younger players, Russell says he doesn't plan to attach age to ice time.

"Our philosophy is, we want to play the players who are willing to compete and work hard every shift," Russell said.

For a full Q&A with Cam Russell, visit Matthew Wuest's Q Files blog at www.metronews.ca/qfiles

"At the same time, we want to grow our young players. But that doesn't mean we're going to give them the job."

"The young players have to earn their ice time."

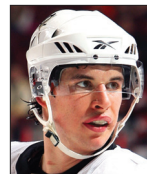

He said that approach will allow the organization to develop the players "who want to become players."

How does he want the Cam Russell era to be remembered?

"As a successful one," said the Cole Harbour native. "You want to win, you want to create and develop a hockey team that everybody in the city wants to see — just an honest group of guys who come and give an honest day's work."

Crosby out of All-Star Game

Tampa Bay's Martin St. Louis will take his spot on the Eastern Conference roster. Crosby has been battling a knee injury, which forced him to miss last Friday's game against Anaheim. He returned to the ice for Pittsburgh's final two games before the all-star break, but will miss the event for the second consecutive year. Crosby did not play in last year's event because of a high ankle sprain.

Koskie wants to make comeback with Team Canada

While several Canadians are either not able or not interested in playing for their country's team at the World Baseball Classic in March, there's one who's quietly been busting his guts for the chance to participate.

In fact, after more than two seasons of inactivity because of post-concussion syndrome, Manitoban Corey Koskie is desperately trying to crack Team Canada's roster for what very likely would be his last hurrah. Metro has learned the ex-Blue Jays third baseman has an agreement in writing

YorkReport

marty.york@metronews.ca

with general manager Greg Hamilton that stipulates he'd be added to Team Canada's 45-man, preliminary roster if he is deemed physically fit by Feb. 1.

"My wife and I have talked lots about this," Koskie confirmed in an interview, "and we've agreed that (playing for Canada) would be a great way to retire." Koskie, 35, said he has been working out diligently for months and has received permission from the Minnesota Twins to train at their camp in Fort Myers, Fla., in February if he gets the green light from Team Canada.

Koskie starred for the Twins from 1998 through 2004. He was the Jays' marquee free-agent acquisition for 2005 but struggled with injuries and was dealt to Milwaukee after the season. Concussions sidelined him while with the Brewers in 2006 and he had to sit out 2007 and 2008.

Should Koskie crack Team Canada's final, 28-man roster, he'd unlikely play much.

Strickland lays claim to Jay-Z shoutout

Rainmen forward/Jiggaman pal says you never know ... he may show up in Halifax one day

MATTHEW WUEST
matthew.wuest@metronews.ca

Jay-Z, courtside, at a Halifax Rainmen game? You never know, now that John Strickland is in town.

"I've known Jay-Z for 12, 13 years, back when rapin' wasn't his first forte," says Strickland with a sly grin.

Strickland, a 6-8 power forward from Manhattan, professes to be friends with the international rap star. He says he attended the wedding of Jay-Z and Beyonce Knowles last April; he spent the past two New Year's Eves with him; and he is even mentioned in a couple of his songs.

"My homey Strick told me, 'Dude finish your breakfast,'" Jay-Z raps, early in Public Service Announcement off his 2003 The Black Album. "So that's what I'ma do."

The 38-year-old won't say how he first met Jay-Z — "That's a long story that I don't want to get into," he laughs — but says the lyric stems from a street-ball game in 2003.

Strickland, who earned the nickname "The Franchise" during his heyday at Harlem's legendary Rucker Park, was playing on a team assembled by Jay-Z in a summer tournament.

The story goes, he told teammate Jamal Crawford to "finish your breakfast" after the NBA star missed a wide-open layup.

"I'm a slick-talkin' dude from New York," Strickland says. "Two nights later, Jay-Z calls me down to the studio ... He says, 'Yo Strick, you just made the album.'"

Could he get Jay-Z to Halifax for a game? "That'll be

From Public Service Announcement on Jay-Z's 2003 The Black Album, a reference Strickland says is about him.

tough, but I could try to do somethin' if we get to a championship," Strickland says.

Strickland is a minor-league journeyman who has made more than 40 stops since playing his last college game in 1995. He attended a New York Knicks' training camp in 1996 and played in the NBA D-League; he has been street-ball teammates with NBAers Richard Jefferson and Kenyon Martin; and he claims to have talked trash with Shaquille O'Neal at Rucker Park.

Strickland calls himself a "crafty veteran," and the Rainmen expect him to shore up their defence and rebounding. But fans may be more intrigued by the former Harlem Globetrotter's reputation for unpredictable on-court antics.

He says he's pulled out a cellphone in a game and even jumped into the stands after hitting a basket and asked a fan, "How did you like that? You ever see anything like that?"

In other words, expect the unexpected when the Rainmen host the Buffalo Stampede on Sunday at 4 p.m.

"I go with the flow ... I can't tell you what's going to happen," he says. "But the fans are gonna be very entertained."

They're definitely gonna get their money's worth."

Rainmen dealing with new PBL playoff format

MATTHEW WUEST
matthew.wuest@metronews.ca

The Halifax Rainmen will have their hands full if they want to make the Premier Basketball League playoffs.

Only four teams qualify for the PBL post-season, with three conference winners gaining automatic entry.

The top two remaining finishers in the overall standings will have a one-game show-down to decide a fourth wildcard team.

The four teams will play off in best-of-three semifinals, with two games hosted by the higher seed.

The championship series will also be a best-of-three, but the league has not yet determined whether it will be hosted by the participating teams or a neutral site.

PBL commissioner Tom

Doyle said he will give "fair consideration" to three formal neutral site bids he has received to host the championship series.

The Rainmen have also talked to the league about hosting it, Doyle said.

"Our preference is to stick with a PBL home court," Doyle said.

A decision is expected in the next week to 10 days. The PBL also does not have plans to hold an all-star game.

The Rainmen, 3-3, have lost three straight games, slipping behind the Vermont Frost Heaves and Manchester Millrats in the Atlantic Division standings.

They play on the road Saturday at 8 p.m. against the Buffalo Stampede (1-3) and return home Sunday for a 4 p.m. rematch with the Stampede at the Metro Centre.

Huskies stay hot on the road

AUS The Saint Mary's Huskies men's basketball team won its fourth straight game and sixth of seven in Wolfville last night. The Huskies squeaked past the host Acadia Axemen 82-80 to improve to 8-3 and take sole possession of second place in Atlantic University Sport. First-year point guard Joey Haywood contributed 24 points, six steals, six assists and six rebounds for the Huskies, while Mark McLaughlin added 18 points. In the women's game, the Huskies lost 69-43.

Arsenault, McConnery tied

CURLING Mayflower's Mary Anne Arsenault and Dartmouth's Nancy McConnery are tied atop the standings at the Scot-ties Tournament of Hearts. Arsenault went 1-1 on Day 2 of the provincial women's curling championship yesterday, losing to clubmate Sarah Rhyno in the afternoon and beating Truro's Colleen Pinkney in the evening. McConnery earned a pair of wins, topping a couple of Mayflower skips, Margaret Cutcliffe in the afternoon and Jill Mouzar in the evening.

Anne Hathaway got a best actress nod for Rachel Getting Married; Mickey Rourke was nominated for The Wrestler; and Waltz With Bashir picked up a nomination for best foreign film.

The race begins

Button, Slumdog lead Oscar nominations

The Curious Case of Benjamin Button, a drama in which Brad Pitt plays a man who ages backward, led the field of Oscar contenders with 13 nominations, organizers said Thursday.

Slumdog Millionaire, the tale of an impoverished orphan's improbable victory on an Indian television game show, followed with 10, while the Batman sequel The Dark Knight and the gay-rights saga Milk each landed eight.

Benjamin Button, Slumdog Millionaire and Milk will vie for best picture at the 81st annual Academy Awards, alongside The Reader and Frost/Nixon. All five also had best director nominations.

Clint Eastwood's recent box office champ Gran Torino was notably snubbed, with no nominations.

As expected, late Australian actor Heath Ledger was nominated for his supporting role as the villainous Joker in The Dark Knight.

The Dark Knight, the biggest box office smash since Titanic in 1997, had been seen as having an outside shot at a best picture slot but all of its other nominations ended up being in technical categories.

With 13 nominations, Benjamin Button falls one short of the record shared by All About Eve (1959) and Titanic. Its nominations included best actor for Pitt, best director for David Fincher, best supporting actress for Taraji P. Henson and best adapted screenplay for Eric Roth and Robin Swicord.

Loosely based on a short story by F. Scott Fitzgerald, Benjamin Button has been a commercial and critical success, and will likely combine with The Dark Knight to boost the

The 81st Annual Academy Awards

Oscar's ratings.

In recent years, Academy voters have favored smaller, arthouse pictures and TV viewers stayed away in droves.

"It is a good across-the-board look at movies of the past year," said Sid Ganis, president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. "I like the list because it is somewhat not as predicted. It goes from little old Slumdog to big Benjamin Button."

Meryl Streep, 59, already the all-time acting Oscar record holder with 14 nominations, landed her 15th for her lead role in Doubt, in which she plays a vindictive nun.

Other leading films included the animated feature WALL-E with six nominations and Doubt, Frost/Nixon and The Reader with five each.

• The Oscars will be presented Feb. 22 at the Kodak Theater in Hollywood. Australian actor Hugh Jackman will host. REUTERS

Ledger's Joker strikes again

NOMINATION Heath Ledger's action movie villain The Joker is getting the last laugh over Hollywood. The Australian actor's best supporting actor Oscar nomination Thursday came exactly a year after he died of an accidental prescription-drug overdose and was a rare exception to the rule that Oscar voters overlook action hero movies. Not only did Ledger help the Batman sequel The Dark Knight become the biggest movie since Titanic, but he also picked up a slew of awards for his chilling but compelling role as The Joker.

Thursday's Oscar nomination put Ledger in line for only the second posthumous Academy Award to be handed out to an actor. Peter Finch won for 1976's Network about two months after he suffered a fatal heart attack, aged 60.

"Oscar voters are notorious snobs who turn up their noses at superhero movies. This may be popcorn, but it is gourmet popcorn," said Tom O'Neil, a movie columnist. REUTERS

Christmas may be over but holiday turkey can still be savoured in Revolutionary Road, the latest overstuffed and undercooked exercise in empty, posturing theatrics from director Sam Mendes.

Based on the book by Richard Yates, the film reunites Titanic co-stars Leonardo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet as Frank and April Wheeler, a young couple trapped in '50s domestic hell, and mines the same bitter but tired "suburban life sucks" territory Mendes covered in his considerably more amusing — but woefully overrated — Oscar-winning satire American Beauty. This one sports half of Beauty's laughs and twice its pretensions and is ultimately duller than a sink full of day-old dishwater.

The picture starts promisingly enough with a clever pre-credits montage that brilliantly sets up the couple's sweaty-palmed courtship, but it goes nowhere slowly, looking pretty (the gauzy cinematography by Roger Deakins is a major asset) while not registering on any emotional level whatsoever.

And for all the endless dramatic fireworks (DiCaprio and Winslet are excellent actors but are like Oscar-baiting gunslingers at a shooting gallery here) we never get to really know or care about Frank and April, thus the big, already controversial climax feels both condescending and utterly hollow.

As dire as Revolutionary Road is, it's almost worth watching just for an all too brief, savage and scene-stealing supporting turn from Michael (Bug) Shannon. As a mentally deranged houseguest who acts as a kind of caustic Greek Chorus to the Wheelers' misfortunes, Shannon seems to be channeling Heath Ledger's manic riff on the Joker.

It's a fascinating and grimly hilarious turn and you're left wishing the picture focused solely on him. Sadly, it does not.

David Lynch's Blue Velvet said more about the cloistered, closed-door miseries of suburban Americana in its first five minutes than this smug, seemingly endless mess manages to sputter out in over two interminable hours. Rent that, skip this.

Frost/Nixon taut drama*Frost/Nixon*Director: Ron HowardStars: Frank Langella, Michael SheenClassification: PGRating: ●●●●●

for Metro Canada

REVIEW It certainly isn't a given that the play Frost/Nixon would make a great movie.

After all, not only is it about Richard Nixon — one of America's least popular presidents — but it's based on a series of simple TV interviews from the 1970s.

Not exactly the stuff of cinematic awe.

When director Ron Howard (A Beautiful Mind) decided to tackle this adaptation however, he was brilliant enough to cast the same acclaimed duo that carried the play on Broadway. As such, the film features some of the year's greatest performances.

In the film, David Frost (Michael Sheen of The Queen) is a flashy English TV host who craves success in the States. Shortly after Nixon (Frank Langella) resigns following the Watergate scandal, Frost gambles his career on a series of interviews with the former president.

As you may suspect, Frost/Nixon is extremely weighty in wordiness, but it's so tautly written that even the most antsy audience member will be riveted. Layered with subtext that reveals a fascinating glimpse into two opposing personalities, Frost/Nixon is only enhanced by its unexpected relevance.

More than anything, Frost/Nixon will be appreciated for its dazzling performances.

While it will surely show Sheen the golden-paved road to stardom, it proves a captivating climax to the underappreciated career of veteran Frank Langella.

As it happens, life truly does imitate art.

Saving Brendan Fraser

InFocus

Richard Crouse
 mrchaos33@hotmail.com

Critics used to love Brendan Fraser. Early on Roger Ebert called him “subtle and attuned” and Barbara Ellen in The Times raved that he was “a revelation — so measured, suave and intrinsically watchable.”

That was then. This is now.

Lately the tone of his reviews has taken a turn. “Noticeably uninvolved” and “worn out” are just two descriptions of his current work in movies like The Mummy: Tomb of the Dragon Emperor. One blogger even wrote, with simple hateful eloquence, “His face makes me angry.”

I thought of this as I watched Inkheart. A big budget fantasy adventure, it encapsulates everything that’s wrong with Fraser’s career. It’s another forgettable performance in an unremarkable movie that allows the premise and the CGI to overshadow everything else. According to avclub.com, in recent years this guy has spent so much time in front of a green screen “his children probably have traces of CGI in their DNA.”

Of course Fraser would counter that he’s not making films for the critics, but judging by the gross of the last Mummy movie, he’s not making them for audiences either.

But let’s put the snarkiness aside for a moment and remember a time when Fraser was actually considered a real actor. Years before he discovered the financial benefits of emoting in front of a green screen he made small, interesting, character-driven

For example, in Gods and Monsters Fraser played Clay Boone, a young straight ex-Marine who forms a bond with James Whale, the elderly gay director of Frankenstein played by Ian McKellen. Fraser’s take on Clay is complicated but sympathetic as he forms a platonic relationship with the older man who becomes the father figure he never had. In this film Fraser holds his own against the masterful McKellen.

The Quiet American sees Fraser as Alden Pyle, an idealist who must learn to deal with moral ambiguity. Again his work is well crafted and thoughtful.

Further acting high points include the image obsessed district attorney in Crash; and Journey to the End of Night’s Paul, a degenerate gambler who double-crosses his father and tries to run off with the cash.

Not since Orson Welles voiced commercials for a frozen pea company has one actor squandered his talent so flagrantly, so let’s remember Fraser for the good ones — the ones listed above as well as 1997’s Still Breathing — and hope that he gets over his green screen addiction sooner rather than later.

Richard Crouse is the author of Son of the 100 Best Movies You’ve Never Seen and film critic for CTV’s Canada AM.

REVIEW In his new movie Inkheart, Brendan Fraser utters this slice of reverberating dialogue: “The written word is a powerful thing. Better be careful with it.”

Nowhere is this perhaps better demonstrated than in the new fantasy adaptation of Cornelia Funke’s hit novel in which Fraser — as bookbinder Mo Folchart — possesses the supernatural ability to bring fictional characters to life just by reading them aloud.

Sure, that might sound like a cool party trick but while Folchart uncovered his talent reading a tome called Inkheart, he also discovered that a real person is traded in reciprocation — namely, his wife.

Now, a decade later, the only way to rescue her is to find a copy of Inkheart and read her back out of the novel.

Along the way, Folchart and his daughter (Eliza Bennett) meet a dizzying array of characters including the book’s desperate hero (Paul Bettany), a conspiring antagonist called Capricorn as well as flying monkeys, a unicorn, Rapunzel and Toto from The Wizard of Oz.

While director Iain Softley is able to engage with big epic stunts and grand effects, Inkheart ironically loses its audience with a convoluted story that never fully satisfies many of its own questions. The notion of swapping real folks with characters in a book is intriguing, but the film never fully gives it reason.

A.C. Newman guilty as charged

The New Pornographers frontman turns up the volume on his new solo album

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

Don't worry if A.C. Newman's solo career confuses you. Usually, when a frontman for a successful band — in this case Vancouver's The New Pornographers — releases a solo album, it often sounds much different from the guy's day job. But not so with Newman, whose rich, Beach Boys-like pop stylings appears on everything he touches. Plus, to him, every record he releases comes from the same place.

"I think Get Guilty is a louder record than Challengers is," says Newman, comparing his latest solo effort to his last New Pornographers record. "I think I'm always trying to change it up, it doesn't matter whether it's a Pornographers album or not."

Clearly, he doesn't view his New Pornographers-self as separate from his solo career. And, while Neko Case and Dan Bejar aren't singing on Get Guilty — Newman's second album sans supergroup — it's still got the same harmony laden tracks and sunny upbeat vibe that's made the now New York-based songwriter's band what it is.

So, if his own material isn't that different from his band's music, why put out a solo album at all? "There is no really good reason for it," he says. "I just do it because I can."

Newman points out that he wrote his first album — 2004's Slow Wonder — after thinking The New Pornographers were breaking up. Neko Case decided to embark on her own solo career, which meant his band wasn't touring. Instead of waiting around, he recorded Slow Wonder during the time off.

This time, however, Get Guilty, was written so he could "record the next New Pornographers record with a clean start in my head."

"I wrote it as kind of a

A.C. Newman, frontman for The New Pornographers, has released a new solo album.

palate cleaning," he explains further. "It's hard to describe, but for some reason, at the end of making Challengers, I decided I was going to write a solo record. There's one song on the disc that I started writing while the Pornographers were mixing. I left the studio and played it in to my phone."

As he's talking Newman, again, wonders aloud why he decided to record another solo album, as if he just realized that it's somewhat redundant. "There's not really any logic to this," he remarks. "I guess it seemed too soon to do another Pornos record."

But, logistically, it did make more sense for him to create a non-NP album, considering who else is releasing a record this year.

"I wanted to make sure the Pornos and Neko don't put out records near each other," he says. "If this had been a Pornographers record it would have been out in January and Neko's record would have been out two months later. She can feel free to stomp all over my solo album, but the Pornos and Neko shouldn't conflict with each other."

Franz Ferdinand embraces Soviet technology

SoundCheck

Alan Cross

alan@ongoinghistory.com

Franz Ferdinand singer Alex Kapranos looks pretty sharp for a man who, not 12 hours earlier, was in the middle of a sweaty club gig as part of a barnstorming promo ride for the group's third album. Drummer Paul Thomson isn't quite as chipper, although that can be attributed to a metabolism that doesn't process caffeine quite as efficiently. He perks up. Eventually.

After two albums in 18 months, it's been three years since the group's last album. So, what took so long? "Making this new record was different. The time it took wasn't so much a luxury as a necessity," sighs Kapranos.

"The adrenaline just runs out," offers Thomson.

There's been a substantial amount of fan speculation on the sound and direction of Tonight: Franz Ferdinand. Were the spiky, dual-tempo arrangements thrown in the bin? Was it going to have African influences? Or had it all gone Jamaican dub?

"There are elements to truth to all those things," Kapranos says. "We listened to African music and Dan Carey, our producer, comes from a dub background. But it's still a Franz Ferdinand record. I mean, I listen to Dizzy Gillespie, but it doesn't mean we're going to make a be-bop record."

Well, maybe, but Domino — FF's U.K. label — is going to put out a special version of the album mixed in a dub style. Kapranos and Thomas say it's an experiment. The version of the album that most people will hear, starting Tuesday, features experiments of its own, including the use of a long-forgotten Soviet-era synthesizer called a Polyvox.

"It was another case of reverse engineering where the Soviets went, 'Right, we can build our own version of these (things)' — and would get it kind of wrong," explain Kapranos. "But their 'kind of wrong' is 'kind of good.' And it's true with the Polyvox. There was an electronic engineer in Kiev, I think, and he wanted to build a Moog (a U.S.-built synth). He knew the theory of how a Moog was built and had heard what they sounded like but had never seen one. So he built this machine that looks like the control panel of a Soviet tank, with big knobs and dials Cyrillic labels everywhere. And it sounds ... kind of vaguely like a Moog — but not really. It just sounds ... cool."

RED CARPET BLUES: The awards season culminates next month in the Oscars, the worst show ever that millions of people watch with what we can only assume is the hope that a celebrity will embarrass themselves with a blubbery acceptance speech that bares their pitiful insecurity for all the world to see.

Actually, the conventional wisdom is that people watch the interminable movie awards ceremony to see a film they enjoyed win, with the corollary effect that the highest-rated Oscars are the ones where a blockbuster like Titanic or a Lord Of The Rings film does a sweep. If this is true — and there's more than enough evidence to assume that it is — then Marc Caro of the Chicago Tribune is right and ABC will be taking a bath on its broadcast this year.

Nominations for the Oscars were announced yesterday, and conspicuously absent was The Dark Knight, a film whose massive box office clearly inspired reverse esteem in the Academy's voters. Only a posthumous nod for Heath Ledger's Joker as Best Supporting Actor put The Dark Knight in any of the top categories, though it's well-represented in the technical categories (art direction, cinematography, sound mixing and editing), when viewers usually get their pizza delivery.

Continuing a trend that's dominated the Oscars for a few years now, the films with the most high-profile nominations are either critical duds, box office underperformers — or both. "The Reader is a best picture (and director) nominee, and The Dark Knight is not," writes Caro with obvious disbelief. "Yes, the highbrow Holocaust film with lukewarm reviews is in the game!"

The 81st Annual Academy Awards

Even the best song category won't pull in viewers, as voters swatted away the chance to have Bruce Springsteen, Miley Cyrus, Beyoncé or even Clint Eastwood perform in favour of Peter Gabriel doing the credits song from Wall-E (i.e. the cue to head for the exits) and no less than two songs from Slumdog Millionaire, which will at least mean some Bollywood production values. It's at times like this that network executives outdo Hugo Chavez in their contempt for fickle, ungovernable democracy.

Rick McGinnis writes about music, movies, books and television, but not opera.

Settlements reached in U.S. TV reality labour

TELEVISION Several major U.S. TV networks and the producers of such reality shows as Trading Spouses and The Bachelor have agreed to pay over $4 million to settle two lawsuits claiming violations of California wage rules.

The settlement will benefit more than 400 workers who were part of the 3-year-old class-action cases, and some of those individuals stand to reap tens of thousands of dollars, a lawyer for the plaintiffs, Emma Leheny, said.

In addition to Trading Spouses and The Bachelor, the shows covered by the suits included The Will, Are You Hot?, Joe Millionaire and My Big Fat Obnoxious Fiance. The litigation coincided with a broader ongoing effort by the Writers Guild of America to obtain a labour contract for the creative workers behind unscripted TV productions as a whole.

Family focus of holiday

Chinese New Year a time to celebrate good luck, prosperity

JOSEPHINE LIM
for Metro Canada

The winter holidays may be over, but the celebrations have just begun for those who celebrate Chinese New Year.

This year, the start of the 15-day celebration begins Monday. The date for this is determined by the lunisolar calendar, which refers to the moon phase and time of the solar year.

It's a holiday that's very family oriented, and every year workers in China will make huge migrations to be home in time for New Year's Eve.

"Usually, New Year's Eve is the time the family will get together, for sure," says Chai Thompson, the president of the Mulan Chinese Culture Centre in Halifax. "The older generation will give the younger generation red envelopes, which will have some money inside instead of gifts."

These envelopes are also called lucky money, and Thompson says these envelopes aren't given to just immediate family — aunts and uncles will hand them out as well.

The envelopes are decorated in red and gold, the two colours for the holiday. Red represents good luck and prosperity, while gold means good fortune and power.

On this day, the house is cleaned in preparation for guests and a big feast is prepared in celebration.

One popular food to eat during this time is dumplings.

"The whole family gets together to make that," says Thompson. "In Northern China, they eat that on New Year's Eve."

On New Year's Day, families will go around to different households to visit their relatives and wish them a happy new year. Red envelopes are also exchanged during this time.

The holiday itself has evolved over the years and habits like giving cards has become a norm. "In olden China, we had cards, but it wasn't so popular," says Thompson. "But now,

"New Year's Eve is the time the family will get together."

everybody is sending cards."

Wal-Mart Canada has gone a step further, and since last year, the company has introduced Chinese ornaments, posters, paper cut-outs, lanterns and even plush toys for the holiday.

The top sellers of those were the lanterns, says Karin Campbell, the manager of corporate affairs for Wal-Mart Canada.

This year, they've also expanded the number of stores that carry these from 20 to 36, says Campbell.

From her customer information, she also says that they've found many non-Asian families have been purchasing these items, as well. As for other cultures celebrating Chinese New Year too, some people don't seem to mind.

"We're happy to share everything with a different culture just to let people know the Chinese culture," says Kevin Fan, the office manager at the Winnipeg Chinese Cultural Centre.

1 Bruce Springsteen

As the new boss — Barack Obama, that is — settles down in his job, the real Boss returns to business with this presciently titled album, Working on a Dream. With the U.S. finally getting a little love from the rest of the world, Springsteen's majestic slice of Americana might just be the soundtrack to the renewed romance.

The velvet-throated train-wreck is still keeping us on our toes. Has she found a new love? Will hubby Blake Fielder-Civil dump her? Has she really cleaned up, as claimed by daddy dear? Stack up the popcorn and stay tuned.

3 Slumdog Millionaire

The Curious Case of Benjamin Button might be the Oscar frontrunner, but Slumdog's still the popular puppy. This rags-to-riches tale set in the unrelenting backdrop of Mumbai will probably be the most fun you'll have at the theatres now. The 10 Academy nods don't hurt either.

4 Heineken

Women have the walk-in closet. And, now thanks to this Dutch commercial, men have the walk-in beer cooler. YouTube it and watch it yourself.

5 Honda Insight

Gearheads went all gooey over this revamped hybrid when it was recently unveiled at the Detroit and Montreal auto shows. Claiming to be the cheapest of its kind (pundits are betting on $19,000), the Insight may just make green driving affordable for someone besides George Clooney. Coming to Canadian dealers in April.

6 Washington D.C.

Has the hub of world power ever looked this sexy? Granted, you may never catch a glimpse of the O-Man himself but with free entries to most major attractions in the city, this is the place to go with the paltry travel budget the recession will allow.

Want to see beyond the charismatic smile and the fiery speeches? Here are five books that will get you up to date about the new U.S. president:

- The Audacity of Hope: Thoughts on Reclaiming The American Dream/Barack Obama: A vision for the future in his own words. A must-read.
- Dreams from my Father: A Story of Race and Inheritance/Barack Obama: A personal take on his own life, with charming insights into his mixed heritage and how that made him the man that he is today.
- Barack Obama: Son of Promise, Child of Hope/Nikki Grimes: This illustrated book is the perfect way to introduce your tiny ones to Obama.

Tattoo artist puts her pen to paper

BRIAN TOWIE
Metro Canada

Getting a tattoo? Whatever you do, don't copy your favourite celebrities.

It's among the handy tips of tattooing dos and don'ts to be found in Kat Von D's new book, High Voltage Tattoo, a photo-driven compendium of one of the world's most notorious tattoo artist's previous work, artistic influences and childhood memories. The star of TLC show L.A. Ink and partner of Mötley Crüe bassist Nikki Sixx delves into the often misunderstood world of tattoo art and the stories behind her markings and those of her best friends and previous clients.

"It was a long time coming," says Von D (née Katherine Von Drachenberg). "The show educates people about the tattoo world and the book is a more in-depth personal look at it."

The Los Angeles-based tattoo artist and soon to be film star (appearing in 2009 vampire flick The Bleeding) has tattooed celebrities such as Jack-ass' Steve-O and Bam Margera, among others. She showcases designs as elaborate and dynamic as something found in an art museum, from reproductions of Pablo Picasso's Guernica on the side of a torso, to more comedic works. Her personal favourites are two portraits of a friend's grandparents. Over the grandfather lies a banner saying, "Mona, get me a beer!" The grandmother's depiction replies, "Get it yourself!"

"Tattoos are a collaborative thing," the 26-year-old says. "The dynamic between artist and client is a pretty free one. The client comes in with an idea and they create a vision together. The idea is always rooted with a client and a good tattooer will take it and make it better."

The world of tattoos isn't all wild rock 'n' roll abandon, however. Von D says she's taken sharp criticism from purists in the business who accuse her of "selling out."

Kat Von D

Keeping a steady hand while you work on someone's skin can also demand a great deal of strength and stamina. Von D points to Dec 14, 2007, when she set a Guinness World Record for doing the most tattoos in a 24-hour period by tattooing more than 400 arms, backs, legs and rear ends. "I just crashed for a whole day when I was done," she said.

It's no cakewalk for a recipient, either. You'll sit in a chair in uncomfortable circumstances for a period of time, so Von D suggests you have a fair idea of what you want done.

"The best advice I'd give anyone getting a tattoo for the first time would be to have a 100 per cent certain idea of what you want to get and not to get something because Nicole Richie has it," she said. "And don't get it because your boyfriend wants you to. And do your research: There's a lot of talent out there that nobody knows about."

Group protests new Spears song

SINGLES The Parents Television Council is warning about the Britney Spears song If U Seek Amy and urging radio stations not to broadcast it because the non-profit organization believes it "would violate the broadcast indecency law."

Saying the title phrase quickly out loud produces a sound akin to spelling out the F-word, said PTC president Tim Winter.

"There is no misinterpreting the lyrics to this song, and it's certainly not about a girl named Amy," he said.

Police investigate extortion attempt

INVESTIGATION Police in the Bahamas have launched an investigation surrounding an attempt to extort money from John Travolta's family, Obie Wilchcombe, a member of the Bahamian Parliament, confirmed to Us-magazine.com.

The full details of the plot have not been released, but Us magazine quotes Wilchcombe as saying only one person — not two, which has been reported — is involved. A Bahamian newspaper, The Tribune, has suggested that the extortion attempt is connected to the recent loss of 16-year-old Jett Travolta, who died of a seizure disorder Jan. 2 at the family's vacation home in the Bahamas.

Wilchcombe denied reports that the person behind the plot is a politician. "The lawyer who brought the situation to my attention is a politician," he clarifies.

Wilchcombe says he was approached about the extortion plot early last week and passed along the information to Travolta's lawyers, Michael Ossi and Michael McDermott, us-magazine.com adds.

"The irony was that the Travolta family just sent a letter of gratitude — it happened that afternoon," says Wilchcombe, referring to a Jan. 12 statement issued by McDermott, Travolta's lawyer, thanking the people of the Bahamas for their support.

"I thought it was a despicable act," Wilchcombe tells Us when he first heard news of the extortion plot. "One person should not destroy the character of the country."

Depp's partner returns engagement ring

RELATIONSHIP Johnny Depp's long-term partner Vanessa Paradis has returned an engagement ring he bought her, people.com reports.

The Pirates of the Caribbean star was recently spotted shopping for the band in California, but Vanessa — who he has been with for 10 years — reportedly took it back as she was unhappy with the design.

A source said: "Johnny got Vanessa a drop-dead gorgeous engagement band but she returned it to the jeweller. She wants her ring to be absolutely perfect."

The couple

— who have two children, Lily-Rose, nine, and six-year-old Jack, together — are yet to officially announce they are planning to tie the knot, but are rumoured to be marrying in April.

The pair are keen to keep the ceremony as intimate as possible, and will only invite 50 of their closest friends and family to the service which will be held in a chapel on the grounds of their $1.25 million US French estate.

Kardashian happy about Razzie

CAREER For Kim Kardashian, it's great just to be nominated — even if it is for a Razzie, people.com reports.

"I'm having a really good laugh," the actress writes on her blog. "I had so much fun filming Disaster Movie and giggled the entire time during the shoot."

The reality star, 28, adds, "There is steep competition in my worst supporting actress category, I have to admit ... including my fantastic co-star Carmen Electra (you go girl!)." METRO NEWS SERVICES

Aniston turning 40

PEOPLE Jennifer Aniston is planning a star-studded 40th birthday party, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The former Friends actress, who reaches the landmark age on Feb. 11, wants to celebrate early with a lavish bash at her new Beverly Hills home on Feb. 7.

The guest list will include Jennifer's boyfriend John Mayer, her close pal Courteney Cox and her husband David Arquette and singer Sheryl Crow.

It is believed the actress is planning the early festivities because John wants to take her away for a romantic break for her actual birthday.

The pair will leave for their intimate getaway — which will also take in Valentine's Day — straight after the party.

Rumours are rife that John is set to propose on Jennifer's big day, and has splashed out on a custom-made engagement ring for her.

Perry takes vow of celibacy?

RUMOUR Katy Perry is taking a vow of celibacy, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The I Kissed a Girl singer has revealed she won't be smooching anyone this year, after splitting from frontman Travis McCoy.

When Grammy-nominated Katy, 24, was asked who she would like to kiss at the upcoming awards, she said: "I've actually taken a vow of celibacy this year ... no kissing anyone."

"Just my cat, Kitty Purry."

Katy and Travis' two-year romance is believed to have ended amid a flurry of arguments.

A source said: "It's sad, but they were fighting a lot in recent months because they never saw each other."

"When somebody becomes very famous very quickly their relationship usually suffers."

Oprah celebrates with Obamas

PEOPLE While she might not have hosted a fancy inauguration party herself, Oprah Winfrey did get to celebrate the occasion with Barack and Michelle Obama.

private champagne toast at the White House with a very select group of friends — including Winfrey, a vocal supporter of Obama throughout the campaign.
